CAMPUS LAW ENFORCEMENT: A STUDY ON THE LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES IN TEXAS

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A previous paper, written for the Law Enforcement Management Institute, "Campus Law Enforcement, A Historical Perspective," identified the developmental process of campus police departments down through the years in the United States.

This paper focuses only on Texas Campus Police Departments. Information was obtained on all four categories of institutions:

Texas Public Universities

Texas Public Community Junior Colleges and Technical Institutes

Texas Independent Senior Colleges and Universities

Texas Independent Junior Colleges

The "Statistical Supplement to the Annual Status Report on Texas Higher Education for Fiscal Year 1989", published by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, was used to identify the institutes. According to this report, Texas has one hundred and fifty-eight institutions of higher education, located within its boundaries. Part of the statistical supplement is included in Appendix Two. The fifty largest institutions, determined by the 1988 Fall enrollment figures, were targeted for survey. A listing of the ranking, by population, of these institutions is located in Appendix Three.

A Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education's "Department Cross Index" has been used as an additional reference. This is a computer printout listing all 2,652 law enforcement agencies in Texas. This document lists the department's name, address, telephone number and name and title of departmental executives. A directory of the ninety-eight Texas campus police departments was developed from this listing. This information was verified and/or updated on the forty departments, with fax numbers added. The directory is located in Appendix One.

A survey questionnaire was developed requesting both historical data and current data on each department. Due to time restraints, the surveys were completed either in person or over the phone. The survey instrument is located in Appendix Four.

CHAPTER II

PURPOSE

The goal of this paper is two-fold. The first goal is to create a directory of Texas Campus Police Departments, which, according to the author's research is currently non-existent. If an administrator or investigator needs to contact another campus department, the number must be located through a long distance information operator. Few law enforcement personnel know the relative student population of other institutions. Communication with other similar size institutions can be invaluable when attempting to justify budget requests or manpower allocations. Having this information compiled in one place makes for a convenient, useful reference. A directory of Texas Campus Police Departments, is located in Appendix Five.

The second purpose of this paper is to verify, with substantial data gathered through the surveys, some of the conclusions drawn from the research in the previous research paper.

CHAPTER III

SURVEY RESULTS

The target group for the survey were the fifty largest, by student population, institutions of higher education here in Texas. Forty survey forms were completed for a significant percentile completion rate.

Of the forty departments surveyed, thirteen became police departments in the 60's, eighteen in the 70's, and nine in the 80's. Most evolved from security departments, with some being created as early as the 20's. "Police Departments" was by far the most common agency name with twenty-five. "Department of Public Safety" was second with seven. Several departments still maintained the name "Department of Security" even though they are a certified police agency.

The title of the administrative executive for the agency's reflect: twenty with the title "Chief of Police", and twenty with the title, "Director". Twenty-nine of the "Chiefs/Directors" reported to a University Administrator's Office, whose responsibilities did not include handling student disciplinary duties. Three still report directly to the institution's "President" or "Chancellor".

The forty agencies had a total of six hundred and sixty commissioned officers employed. Forty-three of these officers were assigned to full-time investigative duties. There were an additional two hundred and eighty non-sworn guards, along with two hundred and three civilians employed by these departments. These agencies operate one hundred and fifty marked, emergency equipped, vehicles, as well as, ninety unmarked units in their everyday duties.

All except fourteen of the agencies issued court appearance citations. Seventeen issued Justice of the Peace citations with nine issuing municipal citations. Every agency also utilizes their own campus citations for parking violations. A few use these campus citations for moving traffic violations and for Class C misdemeanor infractions occurring on campus.

Thirteen agencies stated that they detained violators and called the local municipal police to handle the problem. Seven more stated they had to have permission from administrative personnel before effecting an arrest.

Only sixteen of the agencies stated their patrol officers had full discretionary powers in dealing with the students who had committed a criminal offense on campus. These options are:

- 1. The student being handled "in-house" with a disciplinary referral sent to the institutions administrator's office in charge of discipline.
- 2. A court appearance citation issued.
- 3. Immediate disposition on a citation, or charges filed, and the student jailed. The situation would have to warrant this action and would be subject to some scrutiny by the administration. Nevertheless, the officer in the field had this discretion.

Ninety percent of the agencies report all student infractions of the law to the administration for disciplinary action, regardless of whether criminal charges are also filed.

Several agencies admit they still have a dual standard of enforcement. If a violator is a student, then the violation is handled "in-house", unless it is of such a serious nature that charges must be filed. However, if the violator is non-institutional affiliated, meaning neither a student, faculty, or staff member, then a citation is issued and/or charges filed and the subject jailed. This standard is imposed upon the agency by its institution's administration. There has, to date, been no challenge in court of this practice.

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

Campus police departments in Texas have progressed down through the years in stages like their counterparts in other states. Like institutional administrators elsewhere, institutional personnel who make policy in Texas have been reluctant to delegate full authority to handle infractions of law on campus to their police departments. administrations have adjusted to changing times and have fully trained, armed, officers on their respective campuses. so, approximately one-half of the departments surveyed, place some restrictions on the arrest authority of their campus officers. Naturally, these restrictions create the potential for tension between commissioned peace officers and campus administrators.

One institution had a certified police department in the 70's, but was decertified in the 80's after a new President who opposed having armed officers on campus took office. This attitude apparently resulted from his affiliation with Kent State University during the turbulent period in which students were shot by members of the National Guard who were attempting to control a mass demonstration. Today, through necessity, they have returned to having some armed security guards on staff. The agency's head stated that perhaps in another year, the administration might allow them to again be certified as a police agency.

Policing a campus community is no different than policing any other community. Whatever the governing entity, be it a city council or a county's Commissioners Court, all dictate the priorities of enforcement for their respective law enforcement University agencies to some extent. administrations have the authority to specify on what enforcement level their officers operate. These administrative limitations are valid to a limited degree. A peace officer for the State of Texas has a duty to enforce the law in a fair and equable manner. There are allowances for no discrimination given, be it race, gender, or student status.

Campus administrators throughout Texas need to recognize the professional status of their campus police officers. The Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education sets the licensing requirements for all peace officers in the State of Texas. Campus police officers are required to meet these same standards required of all Texas peace officers.

Some campus officers are hamstrung by an administration which has given them badges and guns, but hypothetically speaking, only allows them to carry one bullet in their uniform shirt pocket. There was an obvious reason why television character "Sheriff Andy Taylor" only allowed his deputy "Barney Fife" to carry his bullet in that manner. Every time "Deputy Fife" would load his one bullet, he would accidentally discharge it. If campus officers continue to do their daily duties in a professional manner, their administrators will notice even though they might not freely admit it. With time campus officers will not have to unload their shirts before washing them.

"Take care of the minutes, for the hours will take care of themselves."

No agency names have been mentioned in this paper intentionally. It was never this writer's intent to obtain information and then draw attention to an agency for it's operational practices. If, however, a reader would like to discuss some aspect of my research on this paper, then I would be glad to do so on a personal basis.
